WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1870.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH, from its original establishment, has been in the receipt of telegraphic news from the New York Associated Press, which consists of the Tribune, Times, Herald, World, Sun, Journal of Commerce, Evening Post, Commercial Advertiser, and Evening Express. The success which has attended our enterprise is, in itself, a sufficient evidence of the freshness, fullness, and reliability of the news which we have received from this source.

THE McFARLAND CASE. The McFarland trial has resulted, as was generally expected, in the acquittal of the prisoner. As there was no doubt or denial of the fact that Albert D. Richardson was deliberately murdered by McFarland, this verdict carries to a greater extent than any other previously rendered the unwritten principle of American law that any husband may with impunity kill a man believed to be guilty of criminal intercourse with his wife.

THE VIENNA PRESSE makes the statement that England will undertake to clear Greece of brigands on condition that King George temporarily withdraws, that a regent be appointed, the ministry dismissed, and the habeas corpus suspended. This would certainly be an effective, if rather curious, method of settling the brigand question, but as no intimation of such a proposition having been made has reached us from England, the probabilities are that the editor of the Presse has based his statement on the boastings of some travelling Briton as to what he would do if he were at the head of the Government.

THE ALGERIAN ZELTING publishes a long letter from Bucharest, giving an account of the present state of things in Roumania. The correspondent says that the Roumanians seem to be already tired of their new Prince, and that his unpopularity is being constantly shown by various political demonstrations. One of the most significant of these was the late election of Prince Couza as a member of the Roumanian Parliament. The Prince has many supporters, especially in the army and among the country population; and, although he has given evidence of political wisdom in declining to take his seat, there is no doubt that public opinion is gradually becoming favorable to his restoration to the Roumanian throne.

AT A RECENT sitting of the Academy of Sciences in Paris, M. Bouley, one of its members, read a paper on the number of deaths caused by the bites of mad animals. According to M. Bouley, who admitted, however, that the statistics from the different departments were not so complete as might be wished, there were, from 1867 to 1869, inclusive, 5,679 persons bitten in France; of these 329, 129 died, 5,6, there was a mortality of 46 per cent. Of the 329 persons bitten 38 per cent. escaped without any further effects. The remaining 12 per cent. failed to report the consequences of their being bitten; probably they also escaped unharmed. Much fewer women than men were bitten, a fact which M. Bouley does not hesitate to ascribe to the petticoats and crinolines. Of the bites by animals afflicted by rabies, 284 were by male dogs, and only 25 by females; 5 by cats, and 5 by wolves. M. Bouley's report shows that, as it has long been asserted by men of science, the idea that canine madness is more prevalent in summer than in winter is a mere vulgar error. In the spring of the different years over which his researches had extended, there were 99 cases reported; in the summer, 74; in the autumn, 64; and in the winter, 74 cases. The period of incubation was generally about two months; after that time has elapsed any one who had been bitten is justified in considering himself out of danger. When madness supervenes it is generally fatal on the third day. Bites in the face would seem to be the most dangerous; out of 32 persons bitten in the face 29 died, 3 only escaping. As to the remedies to be adopted, M. Bouley did not hesitate to affirm that the hot iron was the only one on which any reliance could be placed. Out of 134 wounds which were cauterized, there were only 42 fatal cases; while of 66 wounded persons who neglected cauterization, no less than 56 died, only 10 escaping. Other remedies should only be used when the hot iron cannot be immediately applied, but they should only be regarded as makeshifts. Marshal Vaillant made some interesting remarks with regard to the use of the muzzle, and related the following anecdote, which we would particularly recommend to the notice of the W. B. O. T. S. F. T. P. O. C. T. A., and all others interested in ameliorating the condition of dogs. "At Dijon," said Marshal Vaillant, "the Mayor, M. Verrier, who is now a member of the Council d'Etat, was so persuaded that the muzzle only predisposed dogs to madness, that he forbade its use. No cases of madness appeared when the use of the muzzle was not enforced. His successor had the rule as to the wearing of muzzles re-enforced, and cases of madness were immediately reported. In Constantinople (continued the Marshal) the muzzle is never used, and they do not know what madness among dogs is. In Prussia, the less the muzzle is used the less madness is there." Baron Larrey agreed with his colleague in denouncing the use of the muzzle. M. Bouley promised to give some more information shortly on this subject.

A BRIGHT JURY. A Child Smothered by its Father.—Comprehensive Verdict of an Intelligent Jury.—The Buffalo Express of the 9th inst. says:—Yesterday Coroner Burke was called to hold an inquest upon the body of Louis Preston White, a child seven months old, found dead in bed at about five o'clock in the morning. The Coroner proceeded to the residence of the child's father, where he proceeded to investigate the case with a panel of jurymen, who, in their verdict, distinguished themselves, as will be seen. The story, as substantiated by the evidence, is this:—Louis White resides in Perry street. Four weeks ago his wife died, leaving two children, the deceased and a little girl. He rents the front part of his house for a saloon to Mrs. Robert Brindle. Saturday evening Mrs. Brindle received at the saloon a jug containing exactly one gallon of whiskey, from which she took out a pint and a half. White, who had access to the premises, took out the jug after she had gone and drank himself beastly drunk, and then got into bed with his two little children. Tumbling about in his drunken stupor he rolled upon the infant boy, and, in the morning, yesterday morning he found himself lying on his dead body. In the jug there remained only one quart of the liquor, so that on this evening's debauch, which cost him his child's life, and by his own fault, he must have drunk over two quarts of whiskey, sufficient to have killed almost any common man. The evidence being concluded the case was left with the jury, and those intelligent citizens, after due deliberation, gave as their solemn opinion, sworn and subscribed to, that the deceased came to his death by being smothered by the father, to whom no blame could be attached, as he was drunk at the time. The verdict of the Coroner's jury in the case of Louis Preston White will stand as a shining ornament upon the official records of Erie county.

GENERALITIES. Shocking Murder in Missouri. The Carrollton (Mo.) Record of the 7th inst. relates the circumstances of a shocking and unprovoked murder near Mandaville, in Carroll county. The murdered man was named Butcher—the man who killed him, Abe Lee. Mr. Butcher, who is a respectable and worthy citizen, owned a large farm near Mandaville, with several houses on it. Lee, without leave, moved into one of them, and Mr. Butcher ejected him according to law. On Monday of last week Lee, with some of his cronies, had been drinking, but was at home when he saw Mr. Butcher riding past on horseback. Seizing his double-barrelled shot gun, he deliberately stepped out into the front yard, and shot Butcher in the back, lodging 34 buck-shot in his body and killing him instantly. The murderer escaped. It is supposed he has gone to the "Indian Nation," where he has relatives living. Instantaneous Voting. The United States Senate Committee on Rules have examined a new electric apparatus for instantaneous voting. Each Senator will have before him on his desk, should this plan be adopted, two knobs, one marked aye, the other nay. Whichever he presses at the word "vote" will be marked by punching a hole on the roll at the Clerk's desk, on one side or the other of his name, and the number of ayes and nays will be indicated on dials, visible from every seat. Use of such an apparatus will, however, embarrass those who always follow the lead of some experienced friend higher upon the list when they vote.
